BROKEN COIN THE

By EMERSON HOUGH.

"Meaning?"

"None other than Count Frederick of Gretzhoffen is there besieged at a little pass in the mountains. With him is Roleau, my servant, whom you do not know. Horsemen were all about them when I left. They were holding the little pass as best they could."

"But what caused all this—why were they besieged?"

"Your majesty, it is because they want what belongs here in Gretzhoffen—they covet the Gretzhoffen coin."

"The coin? What coin? Impossible! I have it myself—at least a half of it, mademoiselle."

nave it myself—at least a nair of it, mademoiselle."
"Your—your majesty—how can that be? For see, I myself have it—I fied with it to get safety for it."

King Michael's wits were not quick enough to meet this sudden demand them.

"It travels—that coin—I would not have believed that you could have it. So now they think he has it and have coveted it? Shall yonder ruffian, Cortislaw, take from us what is ours? No, mademoiselle, you are right! You are a faithful messenger to bring to us this news. Listen, I myself will go to the rescue!"

Your majesty speaks as a king," said "Your majesty speaks as a king, said Kitty Gray.
Pompously, the less rapidly for his avoirdupois, King Michael turned now to the halls.
"Call out the guard!" he commanded. "Sound the bugles now and bring me my officers here. Quick, equip me, you men—we must ride—the troops must hoofs rang on the pavements of Greezhoffen avenue as the guard, their sovereign at their head, rode out at speed.

At last something had been found to make King Michael valiant! He dared not lose his valiant friend. In need, of course, he must rescue the man whose courage had left him in such straits,
and whose resolution he so much needed for his own purposes.

Left in the care of one of the household women, Kitty was shown to a room of her own, where she might the better arrange her apparel and dispose herself for rest. She did not know anything of Sachio's presence in the palace—indeed, Michael himself had not been aware of that; but that crafty individual, readily enough learning what was meant by all this excitement, himself sped away from the palace even before the guard was cut. In the swiftest car he could the palace even before the guard was out. In the swiftest car he could secure, once more he took the trait across the narrow neutral lands into the desert, in the effort to reach his own country in time to forestall the consequences which he knew might be serious enough for his sovereign and all concerned. He must get the ear of his king in time—to caution him that now indeed war might break out too soon between these two rival kingdoms—at a day before Grahoffen had secured possession of both halves of the coin. Sachio was sure enough that his possession was not now secured, else there would not be haste on the part of these troops coin!

"Drive, man, drive!" was all that he exclaimed; and the time seemed long to him before at length he found himself once more on the avenues of his own city.
On the mountain side where they had been left, Count Frederick and Poleau, once master and man, now partners elbow to elbow in a common cause, lay and looked down. They

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT-Prepares for all "Sound the bugies now and bring me my officers here. Quick, equip me, you men—we must ride—the troops must form."

The word passed quickly. Hurrying footfalls were heard here and there, and shouts, voices calling the news. Afar in the streets a sense of the excitement passed. About the palace certain ones asked if at last revolution had come. But these questions resolved themselves ultimately only into the summons of the bugles—the palace guard fell into line. Within the half hour iron hoofs rang on the pavements of Gretz-hoffen avenue as the guard, their sovereign at their head, rode out at speed.
